Information circular*

To: Members of the staff

From: The Assistant Secretary-General for Human Resources Management

Subject: 2001 competitive examination for Chinese-language head teacher

1. A competitive examination for the recruitment of a Chinese-language head teacher will be held on 26 November 2001 at United Nations Headquarters in New York. The purpose of this examination is to establish a roster from which future vacancies for Chinese-language head teacher in the Chinese programme of the Learning Service of the Office of Human Resources Management at Headquarters will be filled.

2. The full-time Chinese-language head teacher with the United Nations will teach a specified number of course hours per week and devote a specified number of work hours to establishing and administering courses in the Chinese language for United Nations staff and staff of the permanent missions to the United Nations. The Chinese head teacher sets the curriculum for the Chinese programme based upon the overall objectives of the Language and Communications Programme, designs courses in Chinese language and communication skills and selects and updates materials for these; prepares teaching and examination schedules using the Language and Communications Programme database system; and is responsible for the preparation, administration and correction of the Chinese-language proficiency examination and end-of-term course examinations. The head teacher is expected to use word-processing and database software in performing these duties. The head teacher is also expected to carry out other staff development activities whenever called upon to do so.

3. The examination is open to all staff members of the Secretariat, including those in the General Service and related categories working at Headquarters, as well as to qualified external applicants.

4. Staff members of the Secretariat applying for the examination must:

(a) Have Chinese as their main language;[1]

* Expiration date of the present circular: 31 December 2001.

[1] Candidates' claims to Chinese as their main language must be supported by relevant documentation in their official status files.

01-55392 (E) 101001

(b) Hold an advanced university degree (Master of Arts) in applied linguistics, linguistics, language teaching methodology, languages or a related field;

(c) Have at least five years' recent experience teaching Chinese or another language of the United Nations as a second or foreign language to adults, preferably in a professional setting;

(d) Have experience using multimedia, video, and/or computer-assisted language-learning technology to teach Chinese;

(e) Be computer literate and proficient in word processing, in Chinese and English or French. Familiarity with database applications is desirable;

(f) Have a working knowledge of English or French. Knowledge of additional official languages of the United Nations is desirable. The Board of Examiners, appointed by the Assistant Secretary-General for Human Resources Management, requires that candidates' claims to knowledge of official languages must be supported by relevant documentation in their official status files. Staff members who have been enrolled in a United Nations language course must have passed the United Nations Language Proficiency Examination in that language. Candidates who have not attended United Nations language courses must substantiate their claims to knowledge of those languages by attaching photocopies (not the originals) of either diplomas or certificates from language schools or a brief explanation of how they acquired knowledge of those languages to their application.

5. The Board of Examiners will review all applications and invite the best qualified candidates to sit for the examination. Candidates who are invited to sit for the examination will be notified in writing by the Board. The fact that a candidate has not received a written response from the Board indicates that a candidate has not been selected to sit for the examination. The Board's decisions are final.

6. The written examination consists of the following two parts:

Part 1.

A. Essay questions (in Chinese) dealing with second language acquisition, language testing, language teaching methodology and language and communication skills training. This part of the exam may include an assessment of pronunciation (1½ hours);

B. Knowledge of Chinese language syntax and usage (in Chinese) (30 minutes).

It should be noted that this paper is eliminatory. Only candidates who are successful on part 1 will have their other papers marked.

Part 2.

A. Essay questions (in Chinese) on curriculum course design, including a lesson plan (1 hour);

B. Essay questions (in English or French) dealing with teacher supervision and observation of language and communication skills courses (1 hour).

The use of a dictionary or any other reference material is not permitted during the examination.

7. On the basis of the results obtained in the written examination, the Board of Examiners will invite selected candidates to the second phase of the examination. The Board may require candidates to send an audio/video sample of language teaching prior to being convoked to the second part of the examination. Candidates will be asked to teach a demonstration class and then the Board will interview each candidate to assess personal qualities, professional experience, basic knowledge of the United Nations and ability to work as a member of a team. The interview is an integral part of the examination.

8. On the basis of the overall results of the examination, the Board will recommend to the Assistant Secretary-General for Human Resources Management the names of successful candidates for inclusion in a roster. All candidates admitted to the examination will be informed in writing of the Board's recommendation in respect of their candidature. The Board's recommendations are not subject to appeal. The Board does not release individual results.

9. Additional information on the salary scales for language teachers at Headquarters is contained in information circular ST/IC/2001/61 of 10 August 2001.

10. Staff members who wish to apply for the examination should complete the attached form and submit it, not later than 5 November 2001 to:
